

Love Scent pheromones

The popularity of love scent (pheromones) has greatly increased in the past couple of years, thanks to perfume specialists who never stop from inventing technologies and products that work well with our natural anatomic substance.

The use of pheromones has been scientifically proven to attract the opposite sex, making perfume products one of the body care essentials in the dating arena. People are naturally equipped with substances that make them more attractive and look more pleasant in order to many other people. What love scent (pheromones) do is to take out what is already within our body.

Choosing pheromone perfumes in the market, make sure that the product is very pleasing to you in the first place. There is no sense of picking a scent whose smell does not define your personality. Also, do not ride in on the fashion bandwagon. Just because this celebrity endorses this signature fragrance does not mean that it works well with your body. We have unique responses to scents, and sometimes, what smells good in other people does not work with us, and what smells good in us may not pleasant when worn by other people. In your visit to the perfume shop, analyze the product, check whether the scent stays the same after half an hour or so, and decide whether you still like the way it smells by then.

When you already have your chosen pheromone scent, make it a point to apply or spray it only in the crucial heart points, which include the wrists, neck, back of the head, and the knee line. Do not wear the scent abundantly that you are being a walking perfume bottle. Like clothes, be modest in wearing the actual scent. This make the opposite sex see an image of sophistication in you, captivating them carefully and slowly without having to be obvious.
